

Social and environmental responsibility

Conclusion

Social and environmental responsibilities are vital components of a business strategy. They are the cornerstones of successful sustainable businesses.

Anglo American today has a strong reputation in many countries.

This reputation comes from basing strategic decision-making on respected social and environmental principles. This starts with senior managers and is carried through right down to grass roots community projects.